Global Ski Market

Executive Summary

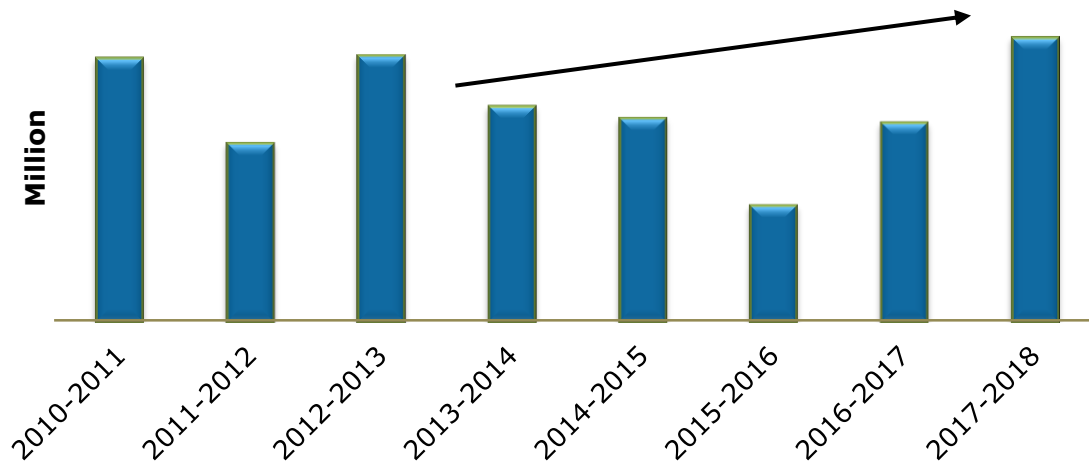

Ski is a snow sport. In earlier days, ski was a means of transportation in snowy areas. The act of manoeuvring long pair of flat runners called skis that are attached to boots or quality plastic shoes is called skiing. Several types of competitive skiing events are recognized by the International Olympic Committee (IOC), and the International Ski Federation (FIS).

There are several forms of skiing that include, Alpine Skiing, Nordic Skiing, Off-Piste Skiing, Backcountry Skiing, etc. The ski gear include, boots, skis, poles, helmets, ski gloves, ski suits, etc. The ski market has been segmented into skiers, skier visits and ski resorts. The ski also includes lifts that include aerial lifts or surface lifts.

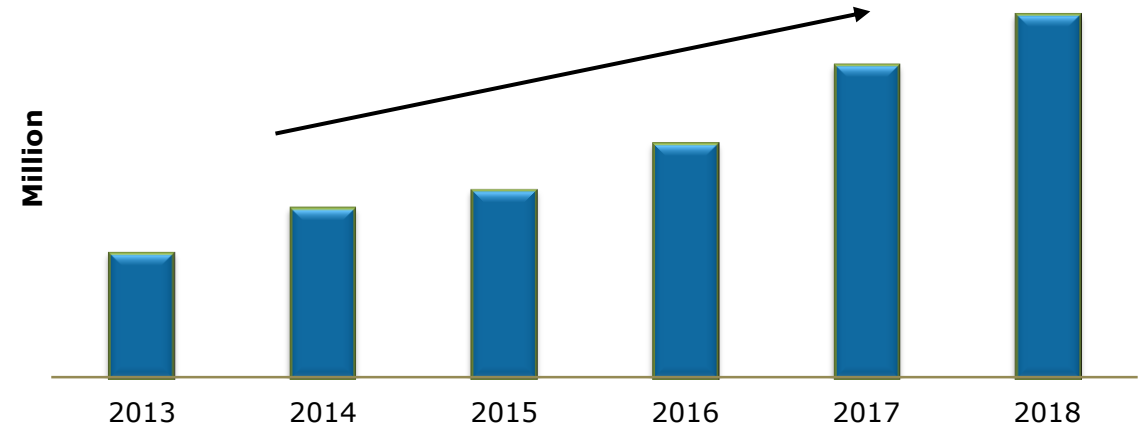

The global ski market by number of skier visits has increased at a significant CAGR during the years 2010-2011 and projections are made that the market would rise by number of skier visits in the next one-two years i.e. 2017-2018 tremendously. The ski market is expected to increase due to growth in GDP per-capita, growing global youth population, etc. Yet the market faces some challenges such as, seasonal nature of industry, increasing unemployment, etc.
