Global Testing, Inspection and Certification Market

Executive Summary

Testing, inspection and certification work in diverse range of industry sectors to deal with verification of the safety, security, and performance of a product, service, or process. These processes are done by conformity assessment bodies through standards and legislations. Testing, inspection and certification have varied operations and quality management.

The Major benefits provided by testing, inspection and certification include improved credibility and image, compliance with legal requirements, lower turnover of employees, higher level of cost control improvement, and faster improvement of various processes. There are three parties in conformity assessment activity - first-party conformity assessment activity, second-party conformity assessment activity and third-party conformity assessment activity.

The testing, inspection and certification market can be segmented on the basis of service (Testing, Inspection, and Certification); sourcing type (In-House and Outsource); and application (Consumer Goods & Retail, Agriculture & Food, Chemicals, Infrastructure, Energy & Power, Education, Government, Manufacturing, Healthcare, Mining, Oil & Gas and Petroleum, Public Sector, Automotive, Aerospace & Defense, Supply Chain & Logistics, and Others).

The global testing, inspection and certification market is projected to rise significantly in the next four years i.e. 2021-2025. The global testing, inspection and certification market is expected to increase due to increasing globalization, rising middle-class population, growth in consumer electronics market, surge in renewable energy projects, rapid urbanization, surge in usage in automotive and industrial applications, strict mandates for safety regulations, inclination towards outsourcing testing, inspection and certification services, etc. Yet, the market faces some challenges such as trade wars and fluctuations, high investments required for automation and installing industrial safety systems, high barriers to entry, etc.
