Executive Summary

Connectors are simple, small sized electro-mechanical devices and equipments which are generally used to connect two or more than two circuits together. It is viable for the circuits to transmit power or signal through the connectors. Connectors is embedded with a metallic structure inside for electrical connections. The connectors always provide a temporary connection between the circuits.

Temporary connection possess many advantages over the permanent connections. Some advantages are easy replacement of a particular circuit in a system; independent checking of input or output of a circuit etc. Moreover, the connector administer easy assembling and troubleshooting. There are number of types of connectors used for different purposes like terminal block, posts, plug and socket connection, blade connector etc.

Connectors are very small yet without its application in various devices circuits cannot work properly. Connector is required in various fields, majorly, Medical, Computer and Peripherals, Instrumentation, Business/Office Equipments, Industrial, Automotive, Transportation, Consumer, Telecom/Datacom and Military/Aerospace.

The global connector market is expected to increase at high growth rates during the forecasted period (2017-2021). The global connector market is supported by various growth drivers, such as increasing electronic content in devices, growing automotive production, development of high density micro miniature technologies etc. Yet, the market faces certain challenges, such as, rising labor cost in low cost manufacturing countries, increasing pressure from OEMs to reduce component cost etc. Few new market trends are also provided such as, increasing demand for compact and thinner connectors, growth in renewable energy sector, induction of high end optical fiber into automobile sector, etc.
