Security Services Market

Executive Summary

In today's world, the security services are considered very important, as the cost of damage or loss occurring due to lack of security has been increasing at a rapid pace. Security services are provided to protect the people from the various attacks, such as criminal activity, damaged property, etc. Nowadays, security is not just limited to the physical security. It also includes the protection of houses, industrial set ups, or even information and documents.

The need for the security services has increased significantly in each and every sector, including household, business, organization and government sector. Security services can be segregated into various categories, namely Static Guarding, Executive Protection, Mobile Patrol, Event Security, Aviation Security and Investigation.

The main purpose of providing security services is to deter illegal and inappropriate actions; to take action for minimizing damage; to report any incident to the clients or to enforce preventative measures. The security services market can be segmented on the basis of type (Guard Services, Electronic Security Services, Cash-in-transit and Related Services and Other Security Services) and application (Commercial and Industrial, Government and Institutional, and Residential).

The global security services market has increased at a significant CAGR during the years 2016-2020 and projections are made that the market would rise in the next four years i.e. 2021-2025 tremendously. The security services market is expected to increase due to the growing number of ATMs, rapid urbanization, increase in crime rate and threats, rising level of economic activity, growth in the building construction, surging industrial activities, etc. Yet the market faces some challenges such as lack of quality manpower, problems in acquiring arms licensing, lack of efficient management, etc.
