Global Healthcare CMO Market

Executive Summary

An outsourcing in which a pharmaceutical firm contacts with a third party (contract manufacturing organization) for the manufacturing of components of its product or whole of its product is known as contract manufacturing. A contract manufacturing organization (CMO) undertakes the production of product(s) under the brand name of another firm.

A firm either big or mid-size selects a CMO for primarily two reasons: it wants to shift (or cut) its cost and focus to its core activities, or the development of its products require special or expert handling.

CMOs provide independent manufacturing services in healthcare sector also. Healthcare CMOs can be segmented into pharmaceutical CMOs and medical device CMOs. After the discovery of chemical formula of a new drug, the pharmaceutical CMOs are given the task of manufacturing it into a whole product, so that the pharmaceutical companies are able to sell it into the market under their brand name. Services offered by pharmaceutical CMOs can be divided into two main activities: primary manufacturing (Active Pharmaceutical Ingredients) and secondary manufacturing (Finished Dosage Formulation). Contract manufacturing for medical devices is one of the fastest growing segments of the medical device industry, as companies are in the race to bring new devices to the market.

The global healthcare CMO market has recorded progressive growth after the spread of COVID-19 and is expected to follow the same trend in coming years. The main driving factors for this growth are surging geriatric population, rising healthcare expenditure, increasing spread of chronic diseases and escalating demand for generic drugs. Yet there are some challenges, which healthcare CMO industry faces, such as rapid technological advancement and dependent on patents, copyrights, trademarks and trade secrets.
